FOREWORD

This volume is one in a series of Bristol and Gloucestershire records issued in accordance with the terms of a legacy left to the Bristol and Gloucestershire Archaeological Society by the late Mr. Alfred Bruce Robinson. Responsibility for publication was entrusted by the Society to a Records Section which has produced a number of volumes dealing with parish records, marriage bonds and marriage allegations, records in which the late Mr. Robinson was particularly interested.

The Records Section wishes to express its gratitude to Mr. Brian Frith who has undertaken the extremely laborious task of transcribing all the seventeenth century marriage allegations relating to the diocese of Gloucester. The allegations are obviously of great interest to those particularly concerned with genealogy and family history in the county. They provide useful clues to the marriages and location within the county of thousands of people whose history is not easy to trace, and up to 1681, they give a good deal of information about occupations. They do not, of course, provide a complete directory of the inhabitants of the county in the seventeenth century, but they do something to compensate for the lack of such a directory.

The Records Section has now issued eight volumes under the terms of the Robinson Bequest, and there is every hope that it will be able to produce at least one more volume before the legacy is exhausted.

In addition to producing volumes financed by the Robinson Bequest, the Records Section intends from time to time to produce volumes dealing with records other than parish records and marriage allegations. The first of these additional volumes—Local Government in Gloucestershire 1775–1800 by Esther Moir—has already been published, and other volumes are in course of preparation.

INTRODUCTION

SINCE the previous volume of Allegations appeared in 1954,¹ all the originals have been transferred from the Diocesan Registry in Gloucester to the City Library where it has been possible to provide greatly improved storage conditions. They thus took their place side by side with the many other records of the Gloucester Consistory Court which are proving so valuable a source to historians and genealogists. The marriage bonds, which commence in 1729, have also been transferred and are much more accessible than formerly.

There has also been a very great increase in the use made of these records on such a scale that one may well wonder for how long they can withstand the handling to which they are now being subjected. Unfortunately not all of those who use them appreciate that they are handling original and irreplaceable material which others may subsequently wish to use. This makes it all the more important that these records should be printed. The publication of the present volume should make it unnecessary to issue any of the seventeenth century books of allegations, except in special cases for comparing handwriting and signatures or for photocopying particular entries.

The present publication covers the period 1681 to 1700, and it continues with Volume VIII of the series of Allegations.² As was pointed out in the Introduction to the previous book, although these Allegations only commence in 1637, much earlier records must have existed but are now lost. All too frequently one finds references to marriages by licence in this diocese in the early seventeenth century for which, unfortunately, no allegation now exists.³

Information concerning the granting of such licences has been given in the earlier volume (see “Notes on the History of Marriage Licences” by Patrick McGrath, pp. xx–xxx) and need not be here repeated, but perhaps some of the curiosities of the search-room may not come amiss.

² The number Q3/8 has now been allocated to this volume under the new identification system set out in “The Diocese of Gloucester. A Catalogue of the Records of the Bishop and Archdeacons,” by Isabel M. Kirby, B.A., published by Gloucester City Corporation, 1968.
as the diocese has produced many unusual items which throw an interesting light on marriage practices in the seventeenth century.

It seems that the Church dealt severely with those who went through a form of marriage when neither banns had been called nor a licence granted. Usually it was the ministers who performed the ceremony who suffered most (possibly because they were habitual offenders), and frequently, when found out, they had to make a declaration promising not to marry people clandestinely. It is not always clear why such clandestine ceremonies were carried out, but couples who wanted to marry secretly do not always seem to have met with the obstacles which one might have expected. Nevertheless the Consistory Court records abound with the misdemeanours both of those who were married and those who performed the ceremony. Nor does it appear that it was only those who were ignorant of the law who were guilty, and there is a good example of this to be found in 1636 when John Taylor of Gloucester, a notary public, was accused of having married Rebecca Jones, daughter of Mr. Henry Jones, "Register of this Court," without banns or licence. The couple were said to have married at Clifton. Certainly both of them must have known that they were offending in the eyes of the Church, if not in the eyes of the bride’s father.

These clandestine marriages may well have been far more frequent than has generally been thought, and when in 1677 the Rev. George Nelme of Wotton-under-Edge admitted that "he hath marryed several persons without bannes or Lycence" one may suspect that he had been unfortunate enough to be found out, but that others may have managed to avoid discovery. In the same year another clergyman, William Hatton, of Tewkesbury, appeared before the Consistory Court for marrying without banns or Licence and it transpired that "the sd. Hatton is noe benefice man & the sd. Hatton knelled down upon his knees in the Courte & asked forgiveness publicly there." William Hatton, who was a native of Tewkesbury, was rector of Cranham until 1689. Presented on the same day was one William Thornedale, "for marrying people being a lay man."

The seventeenth century seems to have been a peak period for such irregular marriages, but it was not until the middle of the eighteenth century that Lord Hardwicke’s Act was introduced to tighten up the law. For the genealogist these irregular marriages present many problems, but subsequent court proceedings may help to make good the deficiencies in the evidence. Thus, one frequently comes across pro-

4 Sometimes during the Commonwealth period such banns were announced by the Bellman and were married by the Minister, July 3d., and again, on in Gloucester we find “Thomas Hathway and Margaret Darke were published by the Bellman and were married by the Minister, July 3d., “and again, on the 13 October of the same year, “Philip Whathen and Elizabeth Halling were published by the Bellman and were married by the Minister and Edmond Collett, Alderman.”

7 Perhaps those who were described as lay men were, in their own eyes, nonconformist ministers and sincerely believed that they had a right to perform such ceremonies.
ceedings relating to marriages performed in private houses. This was a serious misdemeanour but it was not uncommon. There might, however, be special circumstances justifying it. For example, a licence to marry was granted in 1637 to William Marden of Tirley and Margaret Jackman of Redmarley, Worcestershire. At Marden's request, the marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. Simon Jones in Marden's house in Tirley where Marden was lying ill on his deathbed. A number of witnesses were present and later deposed that the ceremony took place "in an upper Roome of the said deceaseds home in Turley about eygth or nine of the clock at night." The ceremony is described in some detail in depositions made in January 1638/9 and they provide a vivid and moving account of the incident.

When marriage ceremonies were carried out in a private house it is doubtful if a record was always entered in the marriage register of the parish in which it took place. If such entries were not made, this could account for some of the occasions when the genealogist fails to find a particular marriage, for no record would exist unless there were subsequent court proceedings. In November 1638 the wife of one Robert Tray of Holy Trinity parish in Gloucester was accused of being present at a clandestine marriage between Thomas Marwint and Grace Gunne of Eastington. No such marriage is, however, recorded at Holy Trinity, at Eastington or at any of the nearby parishes. One Ellenor Eckersall of Winchcombe was presented at a Consistory Court in 1610 for "suffering Mr. Jones, late Curat of Woolston to marry people in her house." She admitted that "there was a marriage solemnized in her house by the sd. Jones" but she offered to take her oath that it was done without her knowledge "she being not privy thereunto for she saieth that she was inticed to goe forth of her house for some Tobacco for one that was there. . . ." The couple referred to, Henry Bendall and Jone his reputed wife, are not to be found in the marriage register of Winchcombe.

The ministers who carried out such illegal marriages are sometimes known to have received payment for their services, and this may well have been the reason why they were prepared to run the risk. One Mr. Davis, "Curate of Derehurst," was said by William Butt, who went through a form of marriage with Margery Jelfe in 1619, to have been given "for his paines ij s. vj d." whilst the vicar of St. Katherine's in Gloucester, Mr. Matrevis, was paid eight shillings the same year for marrying Anthony Martley and Sara Browne.

In the year 1611 Thomas Warne of Chipping Campden was found guilty of being married without banns or licence, and it was ordered by the Court "that uppon Sunday next the sd. warne shall repaire to the

8 On the 23 May 1679 Thomas Poole of Tewkesbury stated that "he was married at Richard Tovies house at the Seven Starrs in Tewxbury by Mr. francis Wells & that there were present Sarah Moorton, Robert Moorton & Emett Collins. . . .," whilst Mr. Wells also married one Robert Porter two years previously. Porter admitted this "and in acknowledg'mt of his fault the Judge did revoke his sentence & gave him Absolution."

9 Here is an early reference to tobacco-growing in the neighbourhood of Winchcombe, which was a noted centre for the cultivation of the plant in the seventeenth century.

One class of persons who were not allowed to be married, either by banns or licence was, it seems, those who were still apprunt. An early example of a case such as this was reported in October 1611 when Margerye Mayoe of St. Mary de Grace parish in Gloucester was said to have been "married by a licence to Thomas Beale an apprunt to Mr. Price." Thomas Beale was likewise charged, but whether the marriage was declared null and void is not clear.12

The present volume must contain many little dramas hidden behind the formal wording of the Allegations, and two of the most puzzling are the entries of the 16 and 17 February 1696/7. On the former date, Charles Workman of Mitcheldean applied for a licence to marry Ursula Godwin of English Bicknor, a widow some twelve years his junior. The application was not granted owing to his being too near of kin. The next day William Rudge of Newland applied for a licence to marry the same Ursula Godwin, and this time the application was successful, and the licence was granted. She must indeed have been a very eligible widow and bride for another suitor to have turned up so soon, and one can almost visualise the lucky applicant waiting outside the Registrar's office for his rival to be turned down. From the registers of English Bicknor we learn that Ursula Godwin had been married barely a year to her first husband, Richard Godwin, a tailor of the parish, when he died, leaving most of his property to his "Loveing, tender & Dear wife Ursula." His will was proved on the 9 February 1696/7, just a week before the Allegation was granted to William Rudge for her second marriage, a good example of indecent haste. It is interesting to note that before her first marriage Ursula's maiden name was Workman, thus confirming a relationship with the disappointed suitor, Charles Workman.

A sadder story probably lies behind the marriage which took place between Bartolomew Richards and Bridgett Rost (see Allegation dated 2 June 1681) for we read that "Mr. Andrews did marry these in theyr Beds."

For the social historian and, to a lesser extent, for the genealogist, the fact that occupations of the bridegrooms are rarely given after about 1684 will be a disappointment. At a later date, in the eighteenth century, the inclusion of occupations is re-introduced. Nevertheless, from time to time the occupation is to be found. Space would probably have prevented John Fluck, of The Leigh (see Allegation dated 14 May 1685) from giving his full occupation, which, according to his will, dated 13 May 1701, was "Sergeant of his Majesties Wine Cellar (first to King Charles ye second then next to King James the second and since to his p'sent Majesty King William the third.)" At his death he was finally described as "Sergeant of her Ma'ties Wine Cellar."13

A warning concerning the alleged ages of couples who applied for

licences has been given in the previous volume. This warning might well be repeated, for it is a continual source of trouble, and perplexes many genealogists when ages given at the time of marriage differ from the age estimated from a baptismal date. No great reliance should be placed on many of the ages given in the Allegations. Many examples could be produced to show that the figures given were often only approximate. It is interesting to check such ages against baptisms when these can be linked with certainty by means of unusual christian or surnames.

At best, the ages may be said to give some idea as to how old or young the person was. Even today there are many who do not know their exact age, and it is not surprising that many people, semi-literate, completely illiterate or orphaned, only had vague ideas about their correct ages. Even as late as 1841 the ages recorded in the official Census Returns had to be only approximate.

The genealogist often tends to use the information given in Allegations concerning the abodes of the marrying parties as a guide to their birthplaces. Unfortunately the abode given is frequently misleading, as the applicants often lived in the parish for only a few weeks in order to establish a residence. It is surprising to discover just how far people moved about even in the seventeenth century or earlier. The movements of such people are not always easily traced, but one useful source of information is to be found in the numerous Depositions amongst the Diocesan Records. Witnesses to Consistory Court cases would often state their name, abode, occupation, place of birth, length of residence in their present parish, and their age. From a study of these records it is clear that people were often born many miles from the parish in which they were married.14

Yet in spite of all the shortcomings of these Marriage Allegations, they still remain invaluable sources of information, often supplying data not to be found elsewhere. Taken in conjunction with other material available to the genealogist, they are among our most useful records.

Once again I wish to express my sincere thanks to those who have made the publication of this volume possible. To have been asked by the Records Section of the Bristol and Gloucestershire Archaeological Society to undertake this second instalment was most encouraging. To have had Mr. Patrick McGrath as the Hon. General Editor of the series was most reassuring, for he has, as always, proved most helpful and painstaking. Permission for the printing of these Allegations has been given by the Diocesan Registrar, to whom grateful thanks are due, as they are also due to the City Librarian in whose keeping the records now are. He and his staff have always been most helpful over many years, and I gladly take this opportunity of acknowledging my great debt to them. The great task of indexing this work has been lessened by the considerable help I have received from my wife.

14 A striking example of the surprising movement of people even in the sixteenth century is to be seen in a Deposition of the 21st November 1586 where Richard Turner, then of Hardwicke, a tailor, stated that he had lived there for some eighteen years, and for some eighteen years prior to that had lived in Quedgley, but that he was 64 years old and had been born at “Caynham” in Shropshire. In 1617, one William Wilhewe, an important clothier in Gloucester, revealed that although he had only lived for eight years in Gloucester he had been born at “Ockley” in Bedfordshire.
INTRODUCTION

It is to be hoped that this work will continue to help all those whose families were fortunate enough to have had their roots in Gloucestershire and all who are interested in the social history of our county. Perhaps they, with the writer, will agree with the Gloucestershire poet, F. W. Harvey, when he claimed

That the Lord God ever made.”

NOTE ON TRANSCRIPTION

The method employed is the same as that used in the previous volume of Allegations, 1637-1680, to which the reader is referred. On p. xi of that volume was given an illustration of the common form used in recording allegations, and this was continued in essentially the same form for many years.

It will be seen that in the present volume the names of parishes in which the marriage ceremony might be performed are often given, and sometimes these are quite numerous. Such parishes have not been included in the Index of Places.
